'Blue Baby' Surgery Saves Cocker Spaniel

By the Associated Press

CHICAGO, March 1.—A surgeon saved the life of a dog this week with surgical technique learned in his operations on babies.

Dr. William J. Potts operated successfully on the heart of "Doll," a three months old black Cocker Spaniel. The dog was taken home yesterday "good as new" by her mistress, Helen Bolte, 21.

Dr. Potts, surgeon-in-chief at Children's Memorial Hospital and on the Northwestern University faculty, developed a "blue baby" operation after early experiments with dogs.

"Doll" was suffering from the reverse of a "blue baby" condition. Instead of insufficient blood from the heart reaching the lungs, too much was going into the lungs at the expense of circulation in the legs.
